In a dream I saw [the Buddha],
 the World's Leader, Siddhattha,
 like the rising hundred-rayed [sun],
 [bright but cool] like a rayless sun,
 the World's Best, the Bull among Men, who'd gone into the forest [then].
 Bringing pleasure to my heart there,
 I approached the Well-Gone [Buddha]. (1-2) [2759-2760]

In the ninety-four aeons since
 I obtained that perception then,
 I've come to know no bad rebirth:
 the fruit of perceiving Buddhas. (3) [2761]

The four analytical modes,
 and these eight deliverances,
 six special knowledges mastered,
 [I have] done what the Buddha taught! (4) [2762]

Thus indeed Venerable Buddhasañña Thera spoke these verses.

The legend of Buddhasañña Thera is finished.
