[526. {529.}¹ Āmaņḍaphaladāyaka²]

The Victor, Padumuttara, was a Master of Everything. RIsing up from meditation,³ the World-Leader walked back and forth. (1) [5611]

Having taken a khāri-load, I was carrying fruit [just] then. I saw the Buddha, Stainless One, the Great Sage, walking back and forth. (2) [5612]

Happy, with pleasure in [my] heart, hands pressed together on [my] head, saluting [him], the Sambuddha, I gave [him] a castor-oil fruit.⁴ (3) [5613]

In the hundred thousand aeons, since I gave that fruit at that time, I've come to know no bad rebirth: that's the fruit of castor-oil [fruit]. (4) [5614]

My defilements are [now] burnt up; all [new] existence is destroyed. Like elephants with broken chains, I am living without constraint. (5) [5615]

Being in Best Buddha's presence was a very good thing for me. The three knowledges are attained; [I have] done what the Buddha taught! (6) [5616]

The four analytical modes, and these eight deliverances, six special knowledges mastered, [I have] done what the Buddha taught! (7) [5617]

Thus indeed Venerable Āmaṇḍaphaladāyaka Thera spoke these verses.

¹Apadāna numbers provided in {fancy brackets} correspond to the BJTS edition, which contains more individual poems than does the PTS edition dictating the main numbering of this translation.

²"Āmaņḍa-Fruit Donor"

³lit., "from samādhi"

⁴āmaņḍam, which PSI defines as "a kind of plant, Palma Christi," Sinhala *eraņ*ḍu. The latter (also ēraņḍu, Pāli eraṇḍa) = datti, croton, i.e., (see Cone, s.v.) the castor oil plant (Ricinus communis, the seeds of which are used to make an oil). BJTS gloss gives kaekiri on v. [1187], which is something like a cucumber (genera Cucumis), which I suspect is wrong; here a footnote on the Sinh. gloss of v. [5613] questions mas komaḍu? eraṇḍu? ("watermelon? castor oil plant?"). Whatever the identity of the fruit, the point is that the protagonist gave the Buddha one of the fruits he was carrying.

4 Legends of the Buddhist Saints

The legend of Āmaṇḍaphaladāyaka Thera is finished.
